Ann Marie (“Annie”) Taliaferro has been an attorney practicing with the law firm Brown, Bradshaw & Moffat, LLP, since graduating from law school in 2000. Annie’s legal practice includes criminal defense trial work, appeals, post-conviction advocacy, innocence work, and some civil rights litigation. Annie was born and raised in Lehi, Utah (a proud Lehi Pioneer and true product of the Footloose-era Lehi). She attended the University of Utah and received undergraduate degrees in English and Political Science, as well as a secondary education and ESL teaching certificate (teaching English as a Second Language). As an undergraduate, she also completed a summer internship with the Supreme Court of the United States, Office of the Curator. Before attending law school, Annie was a high school teacher and coach. She received her J.D. from the S.J. Quinney College of Law and was a William H. Leary Scholar. While in law school, she served as a staff writer and a Note & Comment Editor on the Utah Law Review. Also while in law school and prior to joining Brown, Bradshaw & Moffat, Annie worked as a law clerk for the Utah Attorney General’s Office Criminal Appeals Division and the United States Attorney’s Office. Annie is a passionate advocate for her clients, but even more passionate about defending and upholding the integrity of the criminal justice system. She has served, and continues to serve, on a number of boards and committees to advance these goals and has been recognized by her peers for her work and commitment to criminal justice.
